College of Business & Economics

Welcome to the inaugural ANU College of Business and Economics Alumni update.

Engaging with our alumni is a core priority of the College of Business and Economics (CBE). Through our new quarterly update, we want to ensure our alumni have access to leading business and economic research, and are across the latest CBE news and upcoming face-to-face networking events.

I recently attended our July 2019 CBE Graduation Ceremonies where more than 800 students graduated and joined our global alumni network. As Dean of the College, speaking with graduates, hearing their career plans and academic achievements, is always a moment of pride and reflection. As an ANU alumnus myself, it is important to me that CBE continues to play a valued role in your professional life.

Over the past three years CBE has increased our engagement with local and international industry leaders in business and economics. Through engagement with alumni, we have been able to provide our current students with mentorship, internship, and other industry-linked learning opportunities. Earlier this year we launched our Careers Advisory Services which, in addition to being available to current students, is also extended to our recent graduates. The enthusiasm from our alumni to support our current students has been impressive. I would like to thank everyone who has been involved to date and encourage those interested in engaging to reach out to our alumni team.

Following our successful alumni events in Beijing, Shanghai, Hong Kong, Kuala Lumpur, and Singapore, I am happy to announce that we are planning more alumni events within Australian and overseas. These events are opportunities to learn from and interact with industry experts on current business and economic challenges. We have also launched a new LinkedIn page where we will be posting articles on relevant research and business and economic insights.
